

1. Do you get similar results from each ranking?

I got similar scores for each ranking, with the exception of Kleinberg's hub scores, which were markedly different.

2. Do the rankings concur with your impression of the most important documents, from looking at the graphs?

While there were many documents, the page rank, and Kleinberg's authority algorithms aligned with the documents that I thought were the most important after looking at the results of the pages with the most incoming links.

3. Which ranking do you think might work the best for citation data, like what you're working with in this lab?

I think that the HITS algorithm will work best with citation data, given that page rank is designed for the web.